Record and list of the public paintings kept at the three civic guard halls:² as I have found them, after my return to Amsterdam in February 1653.³

- 1 1: At the longbow archers civic guard hall [Handboogdoelen]⁴ (fig. 1)

Fig. 1 Anonymous, The Longbow- and Crossbow- Civic Guard Halls and the City Arsenal, ca. 1606, etching, 113 x 140 mm, Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam, inv. no. RP-P-AO-1925-635-A

At the longbow civic guard hall: upstairs in the large room [grootte Camer], towards the side of the Lutheran church.

2 [in the margin: “α Ao 1531 and β 1559”]

Before the chimney, an old piece, done, as is mentioned at the bottom of the frame: 1531. [The guardsmen] are 2 high, and in the top row one with a music book

The 2 doors, that belong to this piece, on the sides of the previously mentioned chimney, but done 28 years later, namely Ao 1559 as is to be seen on each door, with half of this number on each door. On the side of the street on the top and bottom of the frame the following is written: “Het lustige rot van de Letter L. Capiteins gebod voldoen sij snel. 15=” [The joyous squad of the letter L. They quickly obey the captain’s orders. 15=].

On the other side of the chimney, on the other door, is rhymed this: “Tweedrachtige spot en Toornicheyt fell. Keer van haer, God van Israel =59” [Discordial ridicule and fierce wrath. Turn from her, God of Israel =59].⁵

3 [in the margin: γ Ao 1529]

Still in the same large room. A piece opposite from where you come in through the door. Hanging lower, where on the side of the frame is written: “Trijn is hier komen wonen 1529” [Trijn has come to live here 1529]. These words are written around where an old woman is painted on the mentioned panel, she has a dish with apples.⁶

4 [in the margin: δ Ao 1558]

On the other side of the chimney, also low, is an old piece from the year 1558. [marked:] H

In which one with a sheet of music, in which these words: “Een man Een wijf” [A man A woman], on music notes.⁷

5 [in the margin: ε Ao 1623]

Above those last two pieces are, on both sides of the chimney, a half of the piece in which Jacob Gerritsz Hoinck is captain to the side of the street and Pieter Hasselaer lieutenant to the side of the target range. From 1623.⁸(fig.2)

² SAA 5059: Collectie Stadsarchief Amsterdam: Handschriften, nos. 41–44; “Handschriften van Gerrit Pietersz. Schaep betreffende de geschiedenis van Amsterdam, ongedateerd” (Manuscripts by Gerrit Pietersz Schaep, regarding the history of Amsterdam, undated). The document “Record and list of the public paintings kept at the three civic guard halls: as I have found them, after my return to Amsterdam in February 1653” can be found in no. 43: no. 3: Schutterijen, ambten, colleges, onderwijs, godshuizen” [civic guards, professions, governing bodies, education, churches]. This document was originally published in Dutch by Pieter Scheltema, “De schilderijen in de drie doelen te Amsterdam, beschreven door G. Schaep, 1653,” in Aemstel’s oudheid of gedenkwaaardigheden van Amsterdam, vol. 7 (1885), 121–41 (available online: http://dbnl.org/arch/sche-078aems07_01/pag/sche078aems07_01.pdf). But several small errors in Scheltema’s transcription have prompted me to make a new transcription as a basis for the translation.

³ Schaep returned from England to Amsterdam earlier that year.

⁴ In 1897, Six made a first attempt at matching paintings that survived in the collection of the city of Amsterdam with those that Schaep’s manuscript mentioned as being in the Handboogsdoelen (Longbow Archers Civic Guard Hall). See Jan Six, “De schilderijen in den Handboogsdoelen,” Oud Holland 15 (1897): 129–38. For the Handboogsdoelen, several other documents have also proved useful: Christoffel Beudeker, Oudheden van Amstelredamme, met aanteekeningen opgehelderd, meerendeels door Abraham Rademaker getekent, benevens een korte beschrijvinge van de oude Schutters Doelen derzelver stad / uit liefhebberij vergaderd en beschreven door Christoffel Beudeker (with sketches after the civic guard portraits in the Longbow Archers Civic Guard Hall and notes of names and heraldic weapons of depicted militia companies) [Manuscript in the library of the Amsterdam City Archives]. Also the notes by Hans Bontemantel in De regeeringe van Amsterdam, soo in ‘t civil als crimineel en militaire (1653–1672), ed. G. W. Kernkamp (The Hague: Nijhof, 1897), 1:186 n 1.

(available online: <http://www.dbl.org/titels/titel.php?id=bont014rege01>) The discovery of MS Egerton 983 in 1903 in the British Library, with watercolor copies after the paintings by Colijns, and lists of the names of the sitters included (see note 24 below), allowed Six to further refine his reconstruction of the paintings in this Civic Guard Hall (MS Egerton, Arms, in colors, of the Masters of the Hand-bow Company of Amsterdam, 1477-1659: Portraits and arms of members of the same Company, for the same period; Large oblong Quarto (Manuscript in the British Library, Bibl. Eg. 983). See Jan Six and W. Del Court, “De Amsterdamsche Schutterstukken,” Oud Holland 21 (1903): 65–80.

⁵¹ This room in the Arquebusiers Civic Guard Hall (Kloveniersdoelen) has been extensively studied, for the obvious reason of the presence of Rembrandt’s Nightwatch there. Most recently Dudok van Heel has made an elaborate reconstruction of the room and its ensemble of civic guard portraits: S.A.C. Dudok van Heel, “‘The Night Watch’ and the Entry of Marie de’Medici: A New Interpretation of the Original Place and Significance of the Painting,” Rijksmuseum Bulletin 57, no. 1 (2009): 4–41. ⁵² Govert Flinck, Governors of the Kloveniersdoelen, 1642, Rijksmuseum, Amsterdam, inv. no. SK-C-370, on loan from the city of Amsterdam (SA 7316), currently on loan to the National Gallery of Art, Washington, D.C., until March 2017; Scheltema, Historische beschrijving, no. 31. Since the painting is not mentioned by Van Dyk, it was probably still in the Kloveniersdoelen at that time; a print from 1748 in the Amsterdam City Archives showing the room seems to support this supposition. The places where the two paintings next to the governors’ portrait used to hang (the Company of Cornelis Bicker and the Company of Albert Bas) are empty (they had already been brought to the City Hall), but the chimney piece contains a portrait of four men around a table. Although the scene depicted in the print differs completely from what is visible in Flinck’s portrait, it can be safely assumed that the printmaker does refer to the portrait by Flinck hanging above the chimney.

⁶⁵ Six and Del Court, “Schutterstukken,” 77, 80 n. 1. Six and Del Court suggest that a copy after the lost painting by Backer can be found in the National Gallery, London (inv. no. 1343). Bauch argued against this idea in his monograph on Backer (Kurt Bauch, Jakob Adriaensz Backer: Ein Rembrandtschüler aus Friesland. (Berlin: G. Grote, 1926), 100, claiming that it was probably a rejected sketch for Flinck’s Company of Captain Joan Huydecoper and Lieutenant Frans van Waveren Celebrating the Treaty of Münster. No further research has been done on whether this was a copy after Backer’s lost civic guard portrait. Mac Laren and Brown asserted that the copy was probably post-1850. (Neil MacLaren, The Dutch School, 1600-1900, revised and expanded by Christopher Brown [London: National Gallery, 1991], 125, pl. 108.) That, however, would not exclude its being a copy after the civic guard portrait, for the general composition of the London painting does resemble the Company of Captain Cornelis de Graeff and Lieutenant Hendrick Lauwrensz of 1642. Moreover, the street scene in the London painting loosely recalls the environment around the Klopeniersdoelen in that period.

⁶⁹ Possibly Dirck Jacobsz, Company of the Klopeniersdoelen, 1532, Hermitage, St. Petersburg. Six and Del Court suggest another possibility: this is the portrait by Cornelis Ketel that Van Mander mentions in his Schilderboeck. Van Mander, Schilderboeck, f. 275: "In t' jaer 1581 vertrack hy uyt Enghelandt nae Hollandt, en quam woonen t' Amsterdam, daer hem veel voor quam te conterfeyten nae t' leven. Onder ander, een corporaelschap van schutters leverde hy op de Cleuveniers doelen, waer van Capiteyn was Harman Rodenborgh Beths, daer hy sich selven oock in conterfeytte in profijl" (In the year 1581 he left England for Holland and went to live in Amsterdam where he obtained many portrait commissions – among others a corporalship of militia which he produced for the Klopeniersdoelen, of which the captain was Harman Rodenborgh Beths and in which he also portrayed himself in profile).
